Shah Cheragh is one of the most important shrines in Iran, located in Shiraz, the capital of the province of Fars. It is a major pilgrimage site for Muslims, particularly during the Nowruz festival. The shrine is known for its beautiful architecture and the presence of the 'Seven Sleepers' (Ashiqan-e Haft Yek), a group of people who are believed to have fallen asleep in the 7th century and remained in that state until the present day.
